TELLS GOOD ONE ON JOHN M'GRAW

John McCloskey tells a good story about John J. McGraw which is a new one. It seems that McGraw has a great aversion for the name "Muggsy" is applied to himself. One day Mc-Closkey and McGraw were making their way up the long incline roadwa ading from the Polo grounds to the elevated station,, a ragged urchin with a bundle of papers under his arm rushed up and shouted, "How'd de game come out, Muggsy?" McGraw turned purple and started after the boy, who, seeing the the expression his face, fled precipitately down the long incline, now crowded with ome-going fans, with McGraw clos at his heels kicking at him at every step but just missing each time. At first the crowd paused astonished at the remarkable sight of the famous McGraw parsuing a newsboy. Then the funny side of the situation struck them and the mighty throng lifted their voices in cheers of encourage nent to the "newsle," who, from glances cast apprehensively over his shoulder noted the close approach of his pursuer and redoubled his efforts while McGraw, his straw hat gone and his naturally pugnacious face screwed up into a frown of terrible ferocity rushed frantically on. Finally, after nearly all the crowd had passed out, McGraw climbed wearlly back up the ng incline, perspiring and limp.

"Did you catch him?" McCloskey asked, but McGraw replied with black look and a few remarks "Mack
